We had 46 orienteers show up for our most popular location, even with the threat of rain most of the day. That threat finally became a reality for a few of the last finishers. But it was only a drizzle, and was over by the time John and I began retrieving controls.

Thanks to John Pascal for not only setting all five courses, but also handling timing, and helping me with control retrieval. Thanks to Peg Davis for giving the beginners' clinic to at least a dozen people.

I gobbled up all the far controls to retrieve myself, and did a nice long leisurely loop in the afternoon. The black clouds were roiling over Pusch Ridge the whole afternoon, but directly above me was a thin layer of benign clouds mixed with open sky, making for a great sunset as I was finishing my retrieval loop. However, after it got dark I realized I had forgotten to bring a flashlight, so I had to return to the car in the dark. After getting my flashlight, I went back out and picked up the last few controls. Way fun.
