About 20 early birds headed to Linden Park this Mother's Day morning for the first street-o of the year. Participants were given a line map of the neighborhood and a list of matching questions to answer and had 45 min to collect as many points as possible. Despite the course setter's best intentions to make the questions unambiguous, a few gave some people a bit of trouble. Sorry! Next time I'll do better.

The top scores were posted by Jeff Coker and Nancy Coker, with Jeff coming very close to clearing the course—he missed one single 20-pointer. The most impressive performance of the day goes to the youngest members of the Osborn family, who covered over two miles with on the street-o and then ran several Animal-O courses.

In addition to the street-o we also had the Arizona debut of animal orienteering, a spatial game for younger kids. In animal-O there's no map. Instead, kids head out to find the 10 animals (pictures of animals on e-punch stands) and try to remember where they are. They then use a clue sheet with a list of animals and try to find them, in order, as quickly as they can. To make it even more fun we use e-punching, so the kids get beeps at each animal and a printout of their time at the end. We had five young participants on the animal-o courses, each running several times. Plan to see more animal-O at future events!
