Written by Amy Rule

Seventeen intrepid orienteers (including one three-person team) showed up early on a Sunday morning for a street-o on the flat, fast terrain of Reid Park. The course opened at 6:15 in an attempt to beat the summer heat. And it worked! Although humid, temperatures were mild and the solid cloud cover kept the solar radiation at bay. Very pleasant!

First-time course setter Michael Rule admits to several map-marking errors, and, for extra fun, he included one question with two correct answers (the "traffic control device" question, for which either correct answer got full credit). Even so, scores were high and times were low, and just about everyone said they had a good time. A big special thanks goes to Peg Davis for catering the goodies. Also, here's a big Tucson welcome to first-time orienteer Zach Schroeder, who missed a few controls but can sure work the clock!
